

Brief Guideline: About Optional Courses

Which courses?

Students enrolled in the MSc in Economics must earn a total amount of 18 credits in optional courses (6 credits each) chosen within the ones available at the following link: <http://economia.uniroma2.it/master-science/economics/course-structure/>

The updated list for the A.Y. 2016-17 includes:

- Development Economics
- Health Economics
- Industrial Organization
- European Public Choice
- Monetary Economics
- Procurement and Regulation
- Environmental Economics
- International Economics
- Macroeconometrics
- Microeconometrics
- Theory of Banking

When?

Optional courses can be taken when preferred. However, the recommended policy is to take:

- The 1st optional course in the First Year, Second Semester
- The 2nd optional course in the Second Year, First Semester
- The 3rd optional course in the Second Year, Second Semester

Remarks

Students who wish to take an exam issued by the LM in Finance or the LM in EEBL which is not included in the list above, can still ask the MSc Coordinator for approving it as their optional course. The consensus will be based on the course's program and the student's motivation.

Students can also take more than three optional courses (e.g. in order to improve their GPA), but this choice is completely up to them and will not affect already registered exams (i.e. you cannot substitute one optional course for another).
