

Lwando Xaso, one of South Africa's leading constitutional lawyers, writer and human rights activist. A self-described "student of change", Lwando currently works for Constitution Hill Trust, the main partner for the Moleskine Foundation's WikiAfrica Education program. In 2011 she had the privilege of clerking at the Constitutional Court for Justice Edwin Cameron. She later worked as a senior researcher for the Public Service Remuneration Review Commission in 2013, and was also a researcher to former Chief Justice Sandile Ngcobo.

Lwando frequently writes on topics of constitutional and international law for the Daily Maverick, the Business Day and various other publications. She also a trustee of the Constitutional Court Trust, and the founder of Including Society - a forum established to explore issues around inclusion in the private sector.