

Andrew M. Fischer is an Associate Professor of Development Studies at the ISS and the Scientific Director of CERES, The Dutch Research School for International Development. He is also editor for the journal Development and Change and founding co-editor of the Oxford University Press book series Critical Frontiers of International Development Studies. His latest book, *Poverty as Ideology* (Zed, 2018), was awarded the International Studies in Poverty Prize by the Comparative Research Programme on Poverty (CROP) and Zed Books and is fully open access. He is a development

economist, demographer and social policy specialist, with a PhD from the London School of Economics (LSE) and over 30 years of experience in development. In particular, he has worked extensively on Chinese regional development policies in the minority areas of western China for over 20 years. His current research examines the external financing of social policy in developing countries.