

Elena L. Pasquini is a journalist with over two decades of expertise, specializing in humanitarian interventions, armed conflicts, international cooperation, and development. Over the course of more than twenty years, she has contributed to various Italian and international media outlets. Notably, Pasquini served as a correspondent for the Devex media group, reporting on the international development policies of the European Union and the activities of food agencies within the United Nations. Her most recent publication is 'La meccanica della pace' (The Mechanics of Peace, People 2022). Beyond her journalistic endeavors, Pasquini actively engages in humanitarian work. She is a board member of the non-profit organization Lazio Chirurgia Solidale, contributing to medical missions at the Hewo Hospital in the Ethiopian region of Tigray. Additionally, she serves on the board of the Pasquini-Tosti Foundation, which is currently dedicated to supporting training and job reintegration projects for vulnerable populations in Italy and abroad.
