

Hi!

Talking about me, I can say that I approached in this world after a degree in Foreign Languages, and I like to define this last choice, one of the most pleasant experience in my life.

I have been considerably shaped from my path: we can define our international and economic world, as 'stage' where we spend our days, and learn its dynamism has certainly helped me in finding out the right approach to foresee the related changes and benefit from them.

Today, I am a business analyst in banking and finance sector and specifically I am dealing with compliance risk which has become one of the most significant ongoing concerns for financial-institution executives.

Tighter compliance regulations have challenged financial institutions in a variety of ways, so we help them to better adapt to changes, to enjoy a distinct competitive advantage.
