Format: 1h meeting. Each meeting of the members will present and discuss one paper also providing a background on the key related literature. Presentations should use slides and be structured in three parts: i) motivation and general background literature; ii) main results in the paper; iii) critical evaluation. Each presentation will be followed/complemented by a general discussion. All the members of the reading group are required to carefully read the paper in advance, actively participate in the discussion, and attend the meetings regularly.

Aim:

1. To help PhD students to you get ideas/get started with writing a paper in this area.
2. To enhance interactions among faculty members/postdocs working in related fields.

Selection of papers: The organizing committee pre-selects a set of papers for possible presentations. It is also possible to propose alternative papers to the organizing committee. Presentations of preliminary projects are also very welcome and encouraged.

Miscellanea: Food will be provided on a voluntary basis by the organizers
